Introduction

On May 1, 2023 Blue Cross Blue Shield of Rhode Island (BCBSRI), Neighborhood Health Plan of Rhode Island (NHPRI), Harvard Pilgrim Health Care of New England (HPHC), Harvard Pilgrim Health Care Insurance Company (HPIC), United Healthcare (United), Aetna Life Insurance Company (Aetna), and Cigna Health and Life Insurance Company (Cigna) filed with the State of Rhode Island Office of the Health Insurance Commissioner (OHIC) to request approval for health insurance rates to be charged to individuals, small employers, and large employers effective in 2024. BCBSRI and NHPRI have filed in the individual market. BCBSRI, NHPRI, Harvard Pilgrim Health Care of New England (HPHC), Harvard Pilgrim Health Care Insurance Company (HPIC), and United have filed in the small employer market. BCBSRI, Harvard Pilgrim Health Care of New England (HPHC), Harvard Pilgrim Health Care Insurance Company (HPIC), United, Aetna, and Cigna have filed in the large employer market. OHIC has the responsibility of reviewing the rates with the goal of holding the insurers accountable for making health insurance more affordable while ensuring their solvency.

Individual, Small Group, and Large Group Review Process

OHIC is currently reviewing the requested rates. This review process will culminate in a final decision in August by the Health Insurance Commissioner approving, modifying, or rejecting the requested rates. Here are the components that the Commissioner will use to make decisions:

In the individual market, OHIC's final decision to approve, modify, or reject the requested rates will consist of the following components for each insurer:

- The Overall Weighted Average Rate Increase represents adjustments to reflect the benefits in plans, including modifications to prior year benefits and pricing. This weighted average rate increase represents the average rate increase that consumers will experience.
- Plan relativity factors represent the differences in plan design features among plans for a given insurer in a given market. Plan design features include items such as: benefits, cost sharing (deductibles, co-insurance, and co-payments) and provider network.

In the small employer market, OHIC's final decision to approve, modify, or reject the requested rates for small employers will consist of the following components for each insurer: (1) the overall weighted average rate increase, (2) plan relativity factors, as above, plus (3) a quarterly effective date projection factor.

- The quarterly effective date projection factor represents the expected annualized inflation for rates charged to small employers renewing at different points during a year. For example, a small employer renewing in January will pay a lower rate than a small employer renewing in December for the same plan because there are fewer months over which they will experience inflation, assuming that the two small employers have a workforce of the same age.

In the large employer market, OHIC's final decision to approve, modify, or reject the requested rates for large employers will consist of an average expected premium increase for each insurer.

- The average expected premium increase represents the average expected percentage change in premiums from one year to the next, holding benefits constant, across all employers that are up for renewal within a given market. It is weighted by employer size. This average expected premium increase is comprised of rate factors that are applied to the employer's existing experience.
